

TUNNEL

VISION

YOUR BI-WEEKLY SOURCE ON THE RPI UNDERGROUND

The end is nigh

By I

Goodnes gracious! The end of the semester is coming quick! This is most likely going to be the last Tunnel Vision this semester, unfortunately. Would anyone doing arch like to continue Tunnel Vision over the summer? Let us know! We could assemble an avengers-level team if there's enough demand. Just a thought.

Also, thank you to those who submitted the census! We got valuable info, 50% of you are hiding your preference for Coke vs. Pepsi..

Anyway, hope you enjoy this issue, and have a great summer!

Tunnel Vision: Out of the Tunnel

The Living Tombstones

By West Virginia

Step on up, I wanna be a machine ...

And those are just two of the songs from this year's spring concert ...

...READ MORE ON PAGE 4!

WE HAVE A DISCORD SERVER!!

What's new in the boxes

Monitors Worship CRT TV

By I

Robots are interesting creatures. About a week ago, one of our website maintainers, JSL, found a bunch of LCD monitors worshipping a CRT TV. What's going on?

In other news, lots of PCs and a few VHS tapes showed up in the JEC! Interesting stuff to be seen in the tech dumps this time, be sure to check out the finds of the week this week!

...READ MORE ON PAGE 2!

Subterranean Homesick Blues

Massive Attack- Mezzanine

By J

Someday you will die. Your body (if its not pumped with resin) will be a grand feast for the critters that were oh so unsubstantial when you were alive. Beetles, slugs, and maggots will slither and wiggle themselves under your skin, devouring the tens of thousands of calories embedded in your muscles and tendons. Fungi will break down what's left into nitrogen and sugars. Returned to nature to continue the cycle you were lucky enough to be aware that you're a part of.

...read my review before your eyes and ears biodegrade and are returned to dust

State of the Art

Tunnel art is back (again again)!!! PLUS: Touch Grass

By I

Amazing stuff happened recently. First, the Touch Grass Music Festival on 4/11 brought so many students together for a 6 hour concert! Read more in our first extra Second, around 4/21 (hey, that's today!), the JEC-DCC tunnel got plastered in paper! Tunnel art's future seems bright, and it's the focus of our extra extra!

Finally, are you going to 'Generic Event Title'? I sure am!

...READ MORE ON PAGES 3,7,and 8!

From the desk

Concerned Parents

By carnivalesque

You ever wonder what goes through the minds of parents of incoming freshmen? Look no further as we delve into the most asked questions yet. Will worries be quelled or quickened? Plus, horoscopes and a special comic!

...READ MORE ON PAGE 7!

QUESTIONS, COMMENTS, NEWS, CONCERNS?

Go to the website below OR the QR code (it's a google form) to the left to submit that and more!

It can be anonymous!

tunnelvisionweekly.github.io

H
A T
'
S

E
N
H
O
W
E
S

-BY I-

Find
Of
The Week

This find of the week was hard to decide upon. I always love seeing VHS tapes, with their potential for lost media and historical footage, but I think that this time it has to go to the Wii and Xbox 360 in the DCC tech dump. Unfortunately, I couldn't find the motherboard for the Xbox but it seemed like everything else was there, while the Wii looked complete except for the disc drive.. Still super cool to see almost recent game systems, never thought I would see the day!

MONITOR EDITION

What a time to tech dump (in the JEC and DCC, at least)! There was a lot of stuff in the tech dumps this time around. Not only an Xbox 360 shell, but most of a Nintendo Wii, plus the JEC of all places had VHS tapes, training tapes, for machinery! It was really cool stuff! The other tech dumps were dead silent, but I feel that the finds this time around were more than enough to make up for it. Have a look at the select finds below!

SOME COOL STUFF FROM THIS WEEK!

ALERT: THE AI UPRISING IS BEGINNING! TURN ON AIRPLANE MODE NOW!!!

Wii really need to fix up this doochiekey. What's it called again?
(yes thank you for laughing)

The only thing worse than the Red Ring of Death is the Ring of RPI Students
scavenging the tech dumps...

JEC

VHS tapes, PCs, so many monitors. Plus, 2 CRT TVs! A great 2 weeks for this tech dump so far.

DCC

An XBOX 360?? A Nintendo WII??!! There were lots of things from around that time here, actually insane pulls!

Sage

A bent flatscreen TV and a rather old printer that barely fits in the garbage can.

LOW/other

As barren as your essay due tomorrow.

View more pictures on our website!

SOTA

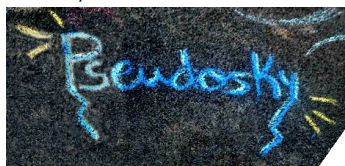

T F H R
A E T
T E

GRASS-TOUCHED EDITION

Hello again! Welcome back to State of the Art! This time around we've got a lot of stuff to share, there was a surprising amount of drawing spaces during the Touch Grass Festival, and I couldn't resist taking some photos! Also, an interesting poster in the throne room, there was a 'generic event title' poster up, with an envelope behind it, holding some neat little paper bracelets, it seems. Haven't seen that one before! If you have more info on this let us know! Plus, there's a real big sketch also up there, interesting stuff. Hope you enjoy this edition of State of the Art! Check out the extra extra for more, from the tunnels?!

A chalk logo by the WRPI table, cool!

(Left) This Just In: Lightning shaped like the word 'Pseudosky' touched down at RPI on 4/11

(Left) Custom-molded crayon statues you could write with at the festival! Reminds me of the terracotta warriors.

WHO WOULD WIN?

Pac Man

VS.

Puck Man
(buff)

in a 1930s womanly voice
"Oh the humanity!"

"D'oh"

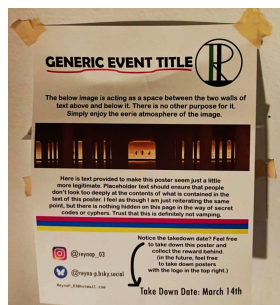

Sisman just wants to see you all SUFFER.

Let us know who you think would win on our discord!

"GZ Basement rocks"
They do indeed, rock awghn!

Hope to see you guys at Generic Event Title, sounds like a blast!

The crowd eagerly watches...

TUNNEL VISION: OUT OF THE TUNNEL

THE LIVING TOMBSTONES

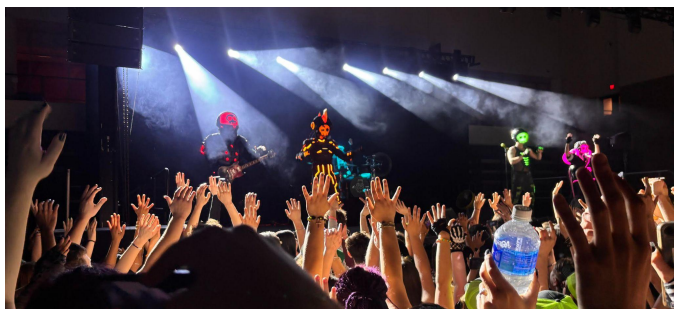

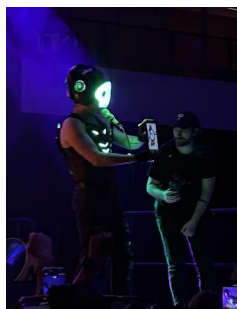

- By West Virginia

We're taking a break from our regularly scheduled water fountain programming for a very special review of this year's spring concert. It was amazing. Truly. From start to finish it was one of the best concerts I've been to in awhile. The opener was a duo called Boy Jr. and the main performance was a band called The Living Tombstones.

The electro pop duo Boy Jr. had amazing energy and they're bound to blow up soon. They played a few of their newer songs like Anxious Attachment Avoidant Attachment, which had a fun call and response that had everyone in the audience screaming at the top of their lungs. They also played a brand new song just released last month, I LOVE OTHER PEOPLE EVEN IF I DON'T KNOW THEM. Definitely worth checking them out on spotify (@Boy Jr.) or anywhere else where you can stream music.

Okay so if I'm being completely honest I only really started listening to The Living Tombstone's when I found out they were coming to RPI for this year's spring concert. That being said, I had heard them before, I knew a few of their most popular songs, Discord and No Mercy for starters, but thats just because I have a phone with internet access. In preparation for the concert I listened to whatever apple music listed as their most popular songs and then eventually just shuffled their whole discography. I can see how it might not be for everyone but I really enjoyed their whole rock, EDM, pop combination. This was their first ever concert on a college campus and Rust (the green one) even drew puckman for us while Zero One (the orange one) took over vocals. The whole band had such a great stage presence. I actually can't imagine how hot it must have been up on that stage in those bulky suits but thankfully UPAC Concerts were blasting the air conditioning in ECAV.

My personal recommendations for getting into their music is as follows: My Ordinary Life (Arguably their most famous song), Step On Up, Jump Up Super Star, I Wanna Be A Machine and Be Alone. A nice mix of old and new stuff :)

Subterranean Homesick Blues

If there was ever a record that felt like it was made not in a studio but in a bunker, with the walls closing in and the air thinning out, it'd be Mezzanine. Massive Attack have always been architects of mood, but here it feels like they stopped designing homes and started creating monoliths; enormous, alien, and cold. As the story goes, 3D and Daddy G were barely speaking. Mushroom, the group's third pillar, essentially walked out midway through, his contributions either scrapped or buried beneath layers of guitar distortion he never signed off on. What remained was a record forged in toxicity and stubbornness as two men pulled a sound in opposite directions until the tension itself became the point. If Blue Lines was a conversation and Protection was a seduction, Mezzanine is an argument that neither side is willing to lose.

"Angel" opens the record as a perfect tone setter for what's to come. That bassline (you already know the one) swallows the atmosphere in any room that it's played in. You feel it in your molars before you register it as music. Horace Andy's falsetto floats over the top like a spirit caught between planes, too pure for the wreckage underneath him. "Risingson" follows and strips things even further back, 3D half-rapping, half-confessing over a beat that sounds like a migraine set to a metronome. "Teardrop" is, of course, the centerpiece. Elizabeth Fraser's vocal hovers somewhere between a lullaby and a last rite. The harpsichord loop is extremely delicate and adds a reprieve for the moody soundscape. This coupled with the lyrical vulnerability on display makes it easy to see why it's the band's most iconic track.

"Inertia Creeps" in my opinion stands as one of the records most underappreciated tracks. Its a slow crawl where the deranged 3D whispers about surveillance over a beat that shivers and twitches like its laced with amphetamine. "Exchange" and "Dissolved Girl" sit in the album's midsection like sediment, thick and intoxicating, Sara Jay's voice on the latter adding a narcotic haze that makes the whole thing feel like sinking into deep murky water with no hope of resurfacing. "Group Four" and "Black Milk" close the record in a wash of strings and dread, a perfect tonal conclusion to this moody swan song to the group as we knew them. The collaborator list reads like a deliberately curated conflux of artistic minds: Elizabeth Fraser of the Cocteau Twins lending her otherworldly instrument to a record that couldn't be further from Heaven or Las Vegas, Horace Andy returning as the group's spiritual anchor, and a relatively unknown Sara Jay delivering performances that rival either of them. But the secret weapon might be Angelo Badalamenti's orchestral arrangements, the man who scored David Lynch's filmography lending his cinematic unease is the cherry on top for the records brooding atmosphere.

This album doesn't feel like it should work. It's bleak, slow, and hostile. The band was actively disintegrating while they made it and the production is so dense it borders on claustrophobic. Nothing they made before had this weight. Yet it's hard not to feel like the album was made not in spite of domestic conflict but as a child of it. Its tension manifested into sound waves.

FROM THE DESK OF CARNIVALESQUE

Birds chirping, flowers blooming, classes slamming us with work. Spring is the season for change and new beginnings; for you, dear reader, transformation is imminent. Enjoy my last words before I move on to the big lecture hall in the sky...

DEAR CARNIVALESQUE, my son is an incoming freshman planning to dual major in Mechanical planning and Aerospace Engineering with a CS minor. My darling boy has a 4.3 GPA and got a 1580 on the SAT. He's planning to do research his first semester and join a couple of engineering clubs, do you have any recommendations? What are the classes like? Should I hire him a private tutor? Also, my baby boy has never lived alone before. Is there a laundry service I can hire? Will his RA wake him up and warm up a glass of milk before he goes to bed? And where can parents sleep in the dorm when I visit every week? I'm missing his sweet precious face already.

- Manic Over Moving My Youngest

DEAR M.O.M.M.Y., your son is going to fail out of RPI. You think that a 4.3 GPA and 1580 is going to cut it here? He'll barely make C's in classes here. I would recommend him doing research under Dr. Tysoe (he does great work in Thermite) and join EWB (Engineers Within Buildings), the urban exploration club. No need for a laundry service, many freshman dorms will dump out the laundry from the machine if he doesn't get it quick enough. As for living accommodations, the study rooms in Barton are always open! When your son eventually stops calling you every day, it's because he got kidnapped and YOU NEED TO WORRY. Good luck, and we'll see you in August!

- carnivalesque

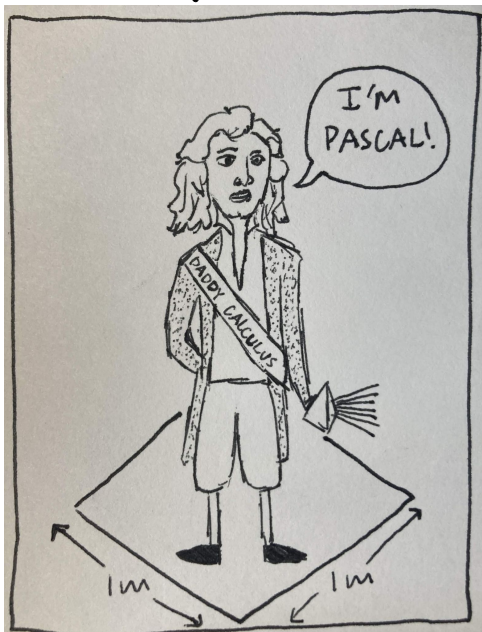

★ ★ Wednesday, April 22 ★ ★
Cancer, Cancer, Scorpio - Luck is in your favor this week. Look for upturned streams and changes in love.

Aries, Virgo, Aquarius - 鼻子 (Bí zǐ) Nose. Lucky numbers: 8 30 14 54 77

Libra, Sagittarius, Capricorn - Academic good fortunes continue, although issues within your closest relationships may fester and grow.

Taurus, Leo, Pisces - Your body is in metamorphosis. Do not resist the changes for we were all once goo in a chrysalis before becoming a beautiful butterfly.

Comic of the Day

The Inaugural Touch Grass Music Festival

Organized by GZ Basement, WRPI, and Ski and Snowboard Club

- By I -

Have you been to the RPI Touch Grass Music Festival on April 11th? If you didn't, you missed out! Don't worry though, we here at Tunnel Vision don't want you to feel left out, so here's a little recap!

It all started in the wee hours of the morning for the staff. Turns out they were there from around 5 or 6 AM all the way to 3 AM the next day for setup and takedown. The main events started at 3, though. And the music went from ~4:30 to ~11. I for one wasn't expecting to stay longer than a few hours, but I ended up being there from 3 all the way to the end of the last set!

There was lots to do at this festival, besides the obvious pastime of touching grass. If you weren't there for music, there were 2 spots for chalk drawings and a table covered in paper for people to draw on with crayons, tons of crafts vendors, SWAG as well of course, and plenty of other games and food you could choose from! Some of the promotional material said there were over 40 booths, and I'll believe it! Some of my favorites were the DDR stand, Ben and Jerry's unexpected return via ice cream cart, the WRPI stand with lots of free CDs, and the various food vendors (though some prices were a bit steep, looking at you $10 hot dog...). Other fun things to do included carnival games with free prizes, Habitat For Humanity's nail hammering setup, RPI Game Dev Club's custom arcade cabinet, and a whole lot of crafts you could buy from other fellow students!

Music-wise, it was cool to see the crowd ebb and flow as the day turned into night. At the start, there was actually nobody dancing. The pit in front of the stage was completely empty, save for a few people. Most were sitting down, ahem, touching grass. As time went on, however, the sitting crowd thinned out and the pit crowd grew. It reached a crescendo during Pseudosky's set (my personal favorite!), and after that the crowd shrank to perhaps half of what it was by the time Mall Goth, the last band, played. One of my favorite crowd things, besides the numerous mosh pits was a game of Simon Says during Pseudosky's set. Haven't seen that one before!

I personally feel like RPI needs a lot more of these kinds of events. I haven't seen such a congregation of students since that one guy ate an entire rotisserie chicken in front of Sage last school year, and it's a great feeling to be around such a horde of familiar people. You never know when you'll bump into someone you know!

There was so much going on at this festival it was hard to squeeze it all into one page. If you have any photos of the event you'd like to share, send them to us and we may feature it in a future edition or our website!

Who played?

Duly Noted, The Bear Necessities, Habitat For Waterfowl, Totally Confused, Stella and the Reptilians, Pseudosky, Dirty Work, Mall Goth

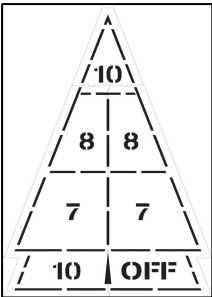

Pictured above: The designated grass-touching area. (aka the stage)

More photos on our website!

PUZZLES N' STUFF

Enjoy the classic game of newspaper shuffleboard above!

Are You Keeping Those Resolutions?

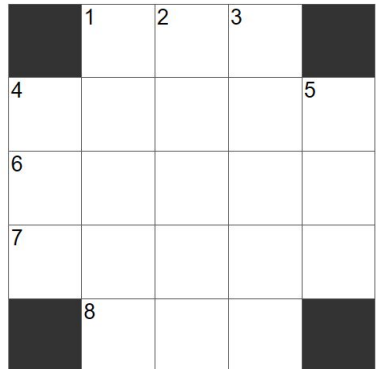

By carnivalesque

ACROSS

- 1 Negative prefix
- 4 Dry January affliction
- 6 Slack-jawed (2 wds)
- 7 Highest academic honor at graduation
- 8 ___ kwon do

DOWN

- 1 Dry November affliction (2 wds)
- 2 First Lady that authored "The Look"
- 3 Title for those following their resolutions (2 wds)
- 4 RPI website with a computer mascot
- 5 Mens ___ (guilty mind)

RPI GEOGUESSR

How well do YOU know campus?

If you think you know the location of this photo, submit your guess in the form! (#2)

Last time : West Hall basement restroom in foyer of original entrance

This time:

"Lost Relics of a Civilization?"

RPI has obtained these Egyptian artifacts and are displayed in this room. But recently they have gone missing! Where is this now empty display case?

By whistler

Last but not least, the credits! Thank you to everyone who made issue #17 possible! carnivalesque, for horoscopes and crossword!

I, Founder
JSL, Website Maintainer
Kris, Cover layout and logo designer
Pi, Subterranean Homesick Blues
West Virginia, Out of the Tunnel carnivalesque, FROM THE DESK OF CARNIVALESQUE (+mini) Cat, Just Cat, for the Number Nonogram!

Disclaimer: The views and content shown in each issue is of the authors only and does not necessarily reflect the views of Tunnel Vision or its other authors.

... And finally you for picking up and reading this edition of Tunnel Vision, hope you enjoyed! Hope you have a great summer, see you in the Fall (or summer?!).

EXTRAPAGE!!

14			9	30
	6	7		31
	12	8		34
15			10	41
58	26	30	22

Number Nonogram: The bottom and right indicate sums. Use each number, 1-16, only once! Email/DM us if you want the solution!

Big thank you to Cat, Just Cat for this issue's Number Nonogram!

Do you read/skim
Tunnel Vision?

Please take our census! (Only one required question)

(or at forms.gle/jf8oi2KBEt0dtiua6)

WE HAVE A
DISCORD SERVER!!

RANDOM NEWS (HELLYEAH)

Did you guys hear about the class clash this Saturday? Sounds interesting! Though I hate to break it to you but the Juniors will win, sorry!

The JEC Bridge is STILL closed.. it was supposed to be done by the start of FALL... CHECK OUT THE EXTRA EXTRA TOO!!

Just wanted to say one more huge thank you to reading this year! It's been so awesome to be able to meet some of you guys, big thanks to GZ Basement for reaching out and distributing some copies, and all the new staff that joined this year, it's been real fun! Hope to talk to you all next year!

Want to help continue Tunnel Vision over the summer? Let us know! We can set something up if there's enough people. I can still help as well (I'll be nearby), just need on-campus writers and such (and interest)!

You asked, we answered.
Here's some more sudoku!

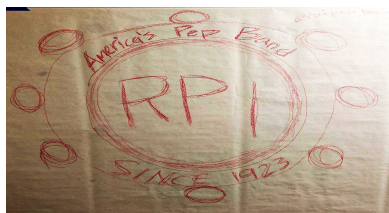

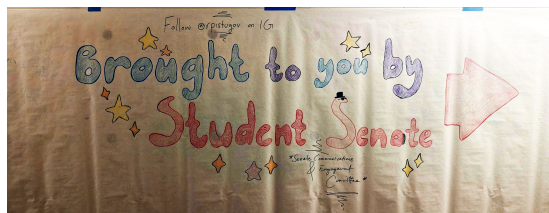

3		5						9
				8	9		3	6
8		7	5	3	6			1
	7	8	2	6	4	1
5			8	9		2
6			1			8	9	7
	8	9	6	4	5		1
	2		9		8	6	4
	5	6		1			7	8

			15				14	3		16			7	13	10
12			5		8		11				13	4	1
	4				7			6		12	14	11		15
			6		10	5		4			11	3			12
					15	3	4	14	16					12
	12	2	9			7	8	15		10		14		4
7						11	1		4					10	16
13				9							7			8	3
4			2	14				16	12	1	3	10	5	13	15
	10	5												4	2
				14		5				13	11
11		16				10								3	12
	13		4				5	11	12	9				10	6
	16					4			14	13		9		1	5
2	8				1		9	16					13	15	14
				16			7	1	6		15	12	8	3	4

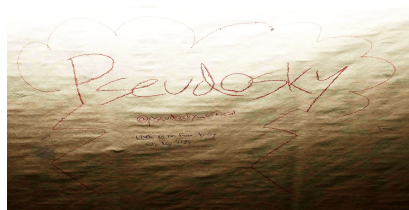

EXTRA EXTRA: TUNNEL ART IS BACK!! (FOR THE 3RD TIME)

- By i -

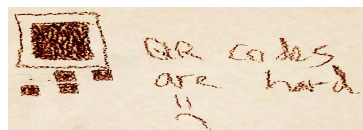

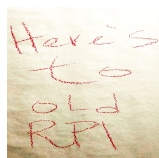

Right before sitting down to do finishing touches on this issue today, I walked into the JEC-DCC tunnels to find the walls looked a bit whiter than before. Then I looked again, did a double take, and whipped out my phone so fast it started smoking. Tunnel art is back, thanks to the Student Senate, and it's so much better than I could've imagined!! The entire length of the tunnel wall is covered in big sheets of paper, and markers and crayons next to the DCC entrance let you get your drawing fix without needing to BYOP. The best part, to me, is that it's official, it's been approved (it seems), as the Senate Communications & Engagement Committee and Student Senate have their name written all over it. The future seems bright for tunnel art once more, just in time for the end of the semester! Below are some of the first art pieces to be drawn in, hope you enjoy!

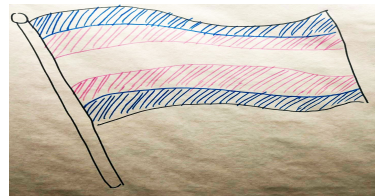

The RPI Pep Band made a big one!

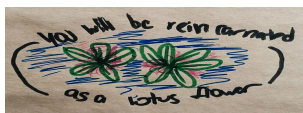

Good to see Pseudosky's here too!

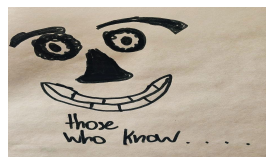

Guys don't scan this QR code... I can't unsee it.. GET OUT OF MY HEAD GET OUT OF MY HEAD GE-

A trans flag seems to always show up basically first, the trend continues!

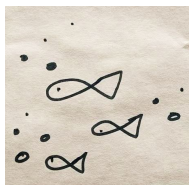

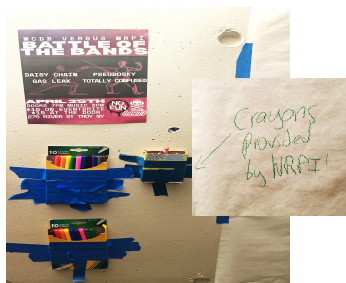

"You will be reincarnated as a lotus flower"

Iykyk, yk?

ctrl + a, ctrl + u

Where do the fish keep coming from?? They're almost as pervasive as the amonguses were..

Orang you glad I showed this one?

