TUNNEL VISION

YOUR BI-WEEKLY SOURCE ON THE RPI UNDERGROUND

We can legally drink

By I

Knurds, we can officially drink as of this issue! (seeing as it's issue 21). Have you guys seen the Poly is back in print (hopefully)? That's awesome! I thought that when their first issue came out this semester it was a one-off, but lo and behold a second one came out 2 weeks later! Sounds like someone's been copying our style… Anyway, be sure to read it if you find copies! This issue's full of fun stuff, so read this one first, of course!! Hope you enjoy this edition of Tunnel Vision!

A PSA For The Tech Dumps, Many Keyboards in VCC

By I

Every PC and electronic that comes into the tech dump has the potential to do great things. When they are not destroyed for their metal content, that is. There may be gold in these wires, but the real value is in what they can be used for. We at TVW and the EHC ask that you at least keep the parts in-tact and only take what you will use. It benefits everyone as a whole. In other news, tonnnns of ThinkPad parts were seen in the VCC!

State of the Art

Detailed drawings galore!

By I

You there! Yes, you! If you're in the mood for some tunnel art, we've got plenty in store for ya this time! In the tunnels recently, was a bit of a boom in detailed art. Ranging from houses, to UFOs, to an addition by likely the RPI Furs, there's a lot to see here this time around!

Physics Professors Pied

By I

Can you imagine hitting one of your professors in the face? On 10/06, you didn't have to! That day, the Physics department let you do just that!

Hockey Returns in Full Force

By JSL

At last we will reveal ourselves to ECAC. At last we will have revenge. You've never seen hockey like this, unless you've been here as long as I have. The first few men's games this season have been revolutionary, and I think it's a sign of a strong season to come. This is also the very first year they've introduced themed hockey nights! Check both the men's and women's team Instagram accounts for when the next one gets announced.

The bridge (was) back
The Poly Prints for 2nd Time This Semester

By I

Probability. It's useful to determine things that are left up to chance. One thing it can't determine, is whether the JEC-DCC bridge will be open on any given day. Not even Schrodinger's cat could answer that one!

WHAT'S NEW IN THE BOXES

TYPE EDITION

-BY I-

Hello again fellow scavengers! In the past 2 weeks, there's been some real interesting developments. First, a FULL Macintosh iifx setup in Low (see the FOTW), as well as every single piece of a ThinkPad was seen in the VCC recently. At least so it seemed. I didn't do a full dive, but tens of ThinkPad keyboards, frames, some screens, some main boards even, were dumped in the VCC. Fresh keycaps, clear plastic covers (?), and a healthy amount of tape storage tapes were in abundance. Possibly the most computer parts I've seen from there! Besides all that, pretty much same-old-same-old. Hope you enjoy the photos below!

Find of The Week

Would you believe it if I told you there was a FULL Macintosh iifx setup in LOW?

Considering the amount of stuff in there over the past few weeks, it definitely seems more plausible. But over my time here at RPI I've never seen such a set!

The monitor, keyboard, mouse, disk drives, and of course the complete Macintosh iifx, were all there in their glory. Unfortunately it didn't boot, but at least I got to assemble them together like the infinity stones!

SOME COOL STUFF FROM THIS WEEK!

Erm, the '90s called and they want their PC back. I won't let them, it's too beautiful a sight.

Many, many keyboards in the VCC (now moved to LOW)

There's so many batteries… Did I just discover INFINITE power?

So. Many. Hard drives. (Courtesy of Zach C., soon to be part of a NAS)

LOW	JEC	West	DCC/other
So much stuff. So much. Maaaaany computers, including the Macintosh, mountains of regular PCs, and stuff like that.	A bunch of protoboards, PC parts, the works. Pretty active.	DiVinci stereo receiver, rare to see new stuff here so pretty neat!	Whole lotta nothing. Nada. Zilch.

Find some cool stuff? Send us pics!

SOTA

TATE OF THE ART

UFO Edition

There's been less activity in the tunnels overall, but sometimes quality over quantity is good too. This issue's SOTA is gonna focus on some more detailed works that came up recently!

In other news, it seems like the tape being used to hold up the tunnel paper is succumbing to the raw power of the JEC-DCC tunnels, it's gonna need some fresh tape, as it keeps falling. At least some of the rips have been repaired!

In other other news, a set of UFO abductions has left the tunnel folks stunned. How did they squeeze in there? Why did they choose our tunnel and our cows to steal? Stay tuned, we'll keep on the lookout for more information! Check out the photos of what happened below!

What a beautiful land, eh pawhrdn'r? Say, where'd my livestock go??

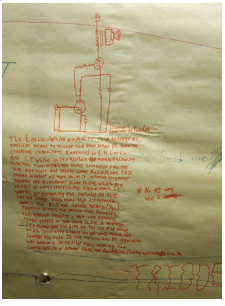

Truly a Bob Ross Moment™

This space for rent. Now with real properties! Great view, too. I heard a cowboy lives nearby.

Breaking News:

UFOs steal cowboy's livestock

Recently, a distraught cowboy went galloping for help, as his livestock were abducted by aliens. We don't know why or how, all we do know is to lock up your livestock and be on the lookout for glowing, floating hats on the horizon. Stay safe out there!

"NO!! NOT THE COWS!! ANYTHING BUT OL' BESSIE"

"THEY TOOK MY GOAT TOO!! WHYYY???"

Tunnel Vision: Out of the Tunnel - Physics Professors Pied

By I

If you happened to find yourself in front of Sage Dining Hall around 4 PM on October 6th, you would have been treated to a bizarre sight.

A crowd of students blocking the entire sidewalk, watching as three physics professors, Dr. Ciolek, Dr. Martin, and Dr. Georg, got pied in the face by students and faculty alike.

Pies were $5 each, and it was all a fundraiser for the Physics department, according to the person with the megaphone. People had to stand behind a tape line to toss their pies. It was energetic, people were filming, talking, and there was a general bustle as is typical in a crowd.

Some things of note were that a presumably faculty member spent a whole $20 in a row, also 2-handing the pie trays to slam 2 professors at once. According to the Poly, one student even spent $100 all on Dr. Georg! Also, many people missed their shots, I'm sure if you look in the bushes behind the fence, you'll find lots of free whipped cream!

TECH DUMPS: A PSA

BY I

IT'S COME TO OUR ATTENTION THAT SOME PEOPLE HAVE BEEN SELLING COMPUTER AND SIMILAR PARTS FOR SCRAPS FROM THE TECH DUMPS.

While this may seem like an easy way to get money, and I know, college is expensive, the tech dumps here at RPI are a sacred place.

They allow us students to parooze the various technology that was already going to be thrown out and sold for scraps by RPI, and save it from this fate. Sure, many items may be old, but there's still plenty of uses for old PCs even if you yourself don't see them. It could be, for example, for playing retro PC games or running old software, getting obsolete out-of-manufacture PC parts to repair machines, stuff like that.

If you or someone you know is scrapping these fully working electronics, or, say, destroying items to get to the traces, you're (or they are) effectively degrading what the tech dumps have been for years. It seems like an easy way to get money but again, taking stuff from the tech dumps with the intention to sell AS-IS is just underhanding everyone else at the tech dumps.

If anything, we ask that you be considerate for others who may be using the tech dumps, competition doesn't make the tech dumps any better, it just degrades the experience for everyone.

Let's preserve the tech dumps as the place where you take what you actually are going to use, and not as a place you can get a quick buck over other tech dump users.

Thank you.

Random News (hell yeah)

By I

Welcome back to Random News (hell yeah)!

Just like that, the JEC–DCC bridge has AGAIN been clo-op-cl… OPENED!! (Who knows for how long? As of 10/18: Not long) Let's hope we can finally enjoy our strolls down the wind tunnel for more than a few days!

This photo was very hard to capture, even with the best high-speed camera (which we definitely have). Moments before and after the shot, the bridge was in fact closed. Literally, blink and you miss it.

Also, is the Poly actually back in regular print? They've been off of regular distribution since around 2018, but this semester they already released 2 copies, 2 weeks apart. Exciting stuff, be sure to check out their stuff when it comes out! Hopefully they keep it up!

The poly, on a table. Yes, a random table. We only allow random objects in Random News (hell yeah).

Lastly, unfortunately, West Virginia has stepped down from regular writing for TVW. Their contributions were greatly appreciated. Thank you!

That's it for today, hope you enjoyed this edition of Random News (hell yeah), we'll see you next time!

We're looking for writers/posterers!
If you have at least 1-2 hours/ 2 wks free and would like to help out, reach out to us! We're looking for more helping hands!

Half a Season to Remember

By JSL

I'm on a three-win streak! As far as attending hockey games goes, I've been to all the men's games we've won at home so far, and it's been a blast.

There's something more to this year, though, and not just with the new ice. Not just with the new team benches, the new glass, the new doors, or the new snow pits they put in so the zambonis don't have to dump ice outside anymore.

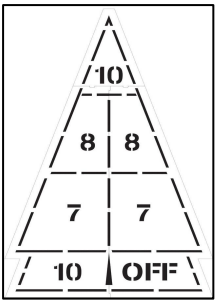

There's a new feeling I get when I get to the field house, like I'm watching the same hockey team I first saw in action my freshman year. These guys look stronger than ever.

Last Friday was also the very first themed hockey night! The Blackout game and the Big Red Freakout used to be it, but they're trying something brand new, and I'm all here for it.

Especially because this first one was Star Wars night. They gave out free lightsabers (though I also brought my own) and announced our starting lineup to Duel of the Fates. Awesome stuff, and I'm sad I won't be here for next year's.
