Over-the-Summer Update

By I

Every summer brings lots of mystery, and fresh tech dump finds! In this edition of Tunnel Vision, have a gander at what happened over the summer, as well as the current state of the tech dumps! Plus, the biggest HDD we've ever seen! Read all about it and more in this issue's WNITB (that's this one)!

State of the Art

New Semester, New Paper (in Yellow?) + Chalk

By I

Yes everyone, you read that right. On around Thursday, 9/3, pictures of President Marty have been seen around the tech dumps, tunnels, and other parts of campus. What does it mean? What does it mean??? In other news, there's some fresh paper in the JEC-DCC tunnel, in yellow this time. Read on to see some of the newest art! And welcome back!!

What's the deal with Rally Week?

By JSL

Everybody is rallying for next week, it seems... but why?

Where did the whole idea come from? How did so many clubs sign up for it so quickly? Who's even in charge? These questions didn't really come to me until yesterday, but I think they're worth looking into after a few other things I've seen and heard about it. Let's figure this out!

Borrowed Time

By JSL

You might actually know me, if not just as our main website guy.

I'm the last member of the Class of 2026. One of them, at least, but that wouldn't be as clean of a tagline. What happens to us when we graduate anyway?

Find
Of
The Week

The find of the week this week has to go to a classic 1977 CRT monitor, which looks straight out of a security office set from a movie. It's big, black-and-white, and the perfect way to break your back!

Coming up in second is a 12-platter HDD in the VCC (now in LOW), it weighs a solid 5 lbs, is very shiny, and a fun little trinket for your heavy-duty shelves!

See photos of these and more to the right!

2ND SUMMER EDITION

Hope you're all as excited to get back to tech dumping as I am! Let's start with a recap. According to my sources, not much was seen over the past summer, save for a bunch of "Tek[tronix] scopes and test equipment in Low for Campus Cleanout Day," which sounds exciting, until you hear there were "EHS tech dump police" all around. It happens. On the upside, since the semester started, things have been looking solid! The JEC has seen lots of activity, while the others, not so much.

SOME COOL STUFF FROM THIS WEEK!

A cop might have slept past a wacky robbery being captured on this thing!

A full 12-course meal (of data) served to you on only the goldiest of platters!

'90s hi-fi always looks cool when on!

A fancy new sign for the JEC dumps!

JEC

A lot of old software, a manual for a logic analyzer, and a bunch of random bits of doohickies.

DCC

Some Xbox 360 parts still hanging around, some box fans, a big all-in-one hifi too!

MRC

Lots of kitchen appliances, vacuum sealer, coffee maker, etc.

LOW/other

A Sony cassette recorder in LOW, besides that, not much.

Find some cool stuff? Send us pics!

The paper was replaced very near the start of classes, and it's already got a healthy amount of drawings. Everything from the eye to a the lyrics of 1985 is back, plus new faces like Garfield, a frog with legs, and more are also on the walls!

In other news, the JEC-JROWL tunnel has been closed for renovations (possibly for asbestos elevator?), and the throne room has been painted over in gray.

In any case, hope you enjoy our findings this issue, we'll catch you in the next one!

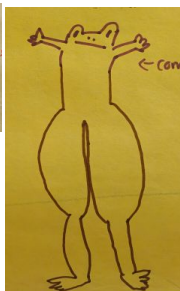

A green marker and purple crayon line spans all of the paper.

MARTY MADNESS!

By I

Stepping in for West Virginia this issue, I've decided to cover a very sudden and shocking turn of events as of ~9/3.

I was there, minding my own business, walking to the JEC tech dump, when what do I see but a photo of President Marty Schmidt, hanging out on the tech dump box! In my shock, I bolted out, down into the JEC-DCC tunnel.

BOOM! Another Marty, right next to the new tunnel paper. In my confusion, I stumble past, only to see the glass doors into the DCC have yet another Marty! Am I hallucinating, I wonder, as at nearly every turn I see another Marty, smiling and enthusiastically greeting me. What does he want from me?? I retreated to my safehouse to deliberate what this could all mean.

Here's what we know so far: he's been spotted at the JEC tech dump, DCC tech dump, a DCC stairwell, the JEC staircase, by WRPI (twice), and I'm sure there's more places that we are yet to discover! Who (or what?) is putting up these signs? Has Marty become omnipotent via the help of alumni funding? We sure don't have the answers, but it sure has been a wild ride seeing him everywhere. If you see another Marty poster, or know who is placing them, let us know! The mystery must be solved, and we can't do it without you!

Marty.

Marty.

Marty?!
(and Stoned Cat)

MARTY?!

MARTYYY?!!

MARTYYYYYYYYYYY
YYYYY?!?!?!!

~~RANDOM NEWS (HELL YEAH)~~

~~By I~~

The JEC-DCC bridge is finally, finally open!! The stairs between the DCC and JEC are closed, though. When will it ever end??? Plus, there's a puck on campus! RPI installed a statue (sculpture? Installation?) by the Folsom Library, it's a red puck with the new RPI logo in white.

In other (random) news (hell yeah), what seems to be RPI's first Rally Week is coming next week! It'll feature music, food, and games. A bunch of clubs, including WRPI and the Ski & Snowboard Club, are helping run some of the events! Signups closed September 12, but perhaps it will still be possible to watch for those that haven't signed up. For more information, head on over to rallyweek.org! (Not sponsored)

On slightly less good news, this semester we're going to have to say goodbye to carnivalesque's section, whistler's section, and Pi's section. They have either graduated or are not interested in writing this semester. I really appreciate your guys' hard work on each issue you've written for, it's been great. You will be missed!

In totally unrelated news, we are a bit short on staff at the moment. If you have any ideas for sections or would like to help with distribution/printing, posterizing, or, of course, writing, let us know via email/discord!

Hope you enjoyed this edition of ~~RANDOM NEWS (HELL YEAH)~~, we'll see you next time!

Rally week has officially kicked off!

Just when you thought Puckman was crazy enough, prepare yourself for Puck... slab?

It's... so... beautiful... How I have missed you, wind tunnel!

Borrowed Time

After & Before Graduation

By JSL

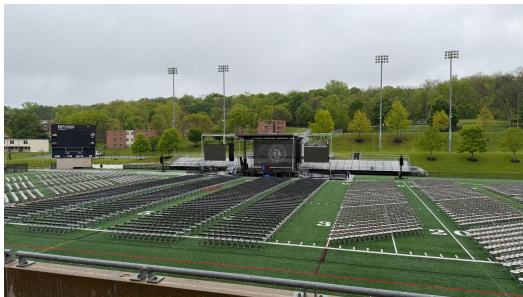

As mentioned amidst the random news of this issue, we're short-staffed after several of our members have graduated, and I'm actually one of them.

So why am I still at RPI? No way I'd go for a co-term. Throughout the four years I've spent here, I've failed a record six classes, not to mention one I had to late-drop in order to prevent that tally from hitting seven.

This is a reality some people here are going to face, but you can actually walk at graduation even if you're a few credits short! That's what I did.

What I do with my time now is a bigger question. I never thought I'd be here for even longer, but it does seem befitting for us as an underground publication to cover what it's like to essentially "haunt" RPI.

It might also help to know if you find yourself in my position that it's not the end of the world. Stay posted for more of this section on this extra semester!

The Commencement stage, as seen a day early!

The new RPI "puck" was originally put on the '86 Field for graduation before being moved. It even blew over last week!

Extra: Is Rally Week Astroturfed?

By JSL

Wait a minute, is the government planning something? Is the government hiding something?

Not our student government, to be clear. They're pretty upfront with their PR, making themselves known when it comes to events they plan.

So when Rally Week started gaining attention without a peep from StuGov, I started to wonder where it really came from. We asked around and learned from several members of StuGov that the entirety of Rally Week is being planned by, like, two or three people.

Who are they? Where are they? None of their posters contain contact info.

clubs and frats, but no
organizers...

For an event seemingly planned to raise school spirit, there isn't a lot that screams "RPI" about it. Not a drop of red on their website!

Naturally I'm led to believe this is a psyop. Some outside firm was hired to inject school spirit within us without realizing what kind of school this is.

Rest assured that they won't get us easily! Possibly due to accounts on Fizz claiming that clubs are pulling out of the event. In any case, we'll be sure to investigate this conspiracy by next issue!
